

I want to relay by this message as to the significant improvement in my home life because of the telephone privacy program. I believe that the telephone is a personal privilege to have and feel that telemarketing calls is an invasion of privacy by the companies. You must understand that my spouse is a telemarketing manager and does this type of sales for a living. I understand that calls made into any home must not occur even if it is a form of incoming generation. As I have told him and I now say to you, people must be prompted to call for service and not be called requesting a service. Unfortunately, this is a sensitive subject in our home but I still stand on the belief that soliciting calls are an invasion of privacy and having the ability to choose the service block is a support for my own rights as a home owner. Thank you for continuing with this protection service, for infact it is a service to us and do not remove this successful program for the families of Indiana.
